Tips to stay safe in NFTs

01 Use official links

Use official pages e.g. Discord link, Youtube or twitter bio links - do NOT assume random links posted on the internet are legit.

02 Scammers

Scammers are everywhere and because NFTs are so new, they target newbies. Check and validate every account by quickly checking engagement on twitter posts and YT videos. It is easy to get fake followers online through the use of bots ect.

05 DM Scammer Strategy

Direct Messaging is the main strategy used by scammers by usually on discord, twitter or instagram. They will be keen to get money from you as obviously that's the scam. They will offer you all sorts of things, VIP access to this, white lists, exclusive access to that, etc.

06 Fake Links

Scammers also post fake minting links, which will be sent via DM as either stealth mints or price reduction mints. The place to get official minting links again is official twitter bio or discord announcements in the REAL discord server. Always verify the discord server through chatting in general chat.

09 Compromised Discords

From time to time Discord servers get hacked. Official pages/discord for an NFT collection can get hacked. This is why double-checking on other socials is the best thing, if an official discord is hacked they usually immediately alert the community on twitter, instagram, youtube, etc.

10 OpenSea Fake NFTs

On Opensea there are many fake versions of official collections. Check the activity tab to see if lots of people are trading. General on a scam collection there will be little to no volume on trades. Also double-check the Opensea link with official discord/twitter/website to be sure.
